

Many of you have asked us what are the differences between Tomatis® Infinite, Forbrain® and Soundsory®. Here are the similarities and differences:

- Forbrain®: a targeted action on the audio-vocal loop

The Forbrain® headset works on the audio-vocal loop. It's a specialised headset that combines the 2 types of sound conduction processes we all use – a bone conduction transducer and a dynamic audio filter – and uses them to amplify your frequencies and enhance your voice, allowing you to evaluate your own voice and speech.

Although it can be used on anybody from age 2 years old and up, students can benefit from FORBRAIN by doing their homework and reading their lessons out loud. Not only is it proven to improve concentration and help avoid getting distracted, it also accelerates the learning process and develops memory.

- Tomatis® Infinite: the companion of a personalised listening journey

The Tomatis® Infinite is your personal headset for the Tomatis® Method. It has been designed by TOMATIS DEVELOPPEMENT S.A. to accompany you throughout your listening journey. It is used with the TalksUp® during individualised sessions. In addition, it includes 3 universal programs: a preparatory program, the "Warm-Up", whose main objective is to introduce the music and the parameters used in the Tomatis® Method, and 2 consolidation programs, called "Follow-Up". The latter have a complementary role to the work of the TalksUp®, and consolidate the effects of your personalised programs. Tomatis® Infinite also has a microphone attachment that allows you to work on the audio-vocal loop. It has the same functionalities as Forbrain® in this regard. The main difference is that Forbrain® only transmits sound by bone conduction, whereas Tomatis® Infinite transmits sound by bone AND air conduction, for a more powerful action.

- Soundsory®: a sensory-motor work

The Soundsory® headset works mainly on the vestibular and sensory-motor system. It contains only one program and its lively music gives the body the desire to move and follow its rhythm. Its effect is much softer than that of the Tomatis® Method, and it can be used to follow a complete Tomatis® course.
